evening, from a somewhat extended visit to the land of his nativity-the Emerald Isle. It is about a life-time since he had set foot on the bogs of old Iseland, and his visit was, therefore, like one of the pilgrims to the sacred shrine of Mecca or a son returning to the manor after many years of wandering. He returns satisfied with his visit. He will live contented in the new State of Washington ; not that period. he loves Ireland less, but that he loves free America more. And of all portions of the land of his adoption, from the broad Pacific to the mighty Atlantic, he finds no place that he is content to remain in like our own beloved Washington. This is not strange. It is the testimony of all who have traveled and are able to institute a compari- wind-up to the festivities of the day. son between this famed part of God's universe and all else that remains. The pocket-book joke was perpetrated last evening under amusing circumstances. That wag, Johnny Cook, having no use for a pocket book, conceived the idea of filling his old wallet with putty, to give it the apparent weight of gold, and using it as a decoy. Placing it on the sidewalk he awaited developments. Several individuals, whose vision soared immeasurably above pelf, among whom was the OLYM. PIAN man, passed along without see ing the tempting object, but finally, as is ever the case, along came the sucker who never misses seeing anything. He paused a moment, quietly stooped down, picked up the wallet and slipping in his pocket, made a bee-line for an alley-way a short distance off. As he turned into this retreat, out came the pocket-book, and with trembling fingers the clasp was forced, when lo! it suddenly dawned upon the victim that he had been sold. Did he "pocket the joke" in silence, as becometh ; wise man under trying circumstances?
