Judge Terry's life has been marked by evipia, had been selected as the Pudences of ferocity of temper that have indellibly stamped the mark of Cain on his character. Ever since the killing of Broderick he has been under a cloud, and public condemnation has been by no means lessened by his conduct during the quarter of a century that has intervened. His wife, the notorious Sarah Althea Hill-Sharon, is held in no higher repute. She was in a large degree the cause of the assault upon Judge Field. The relentless persecution began with her envenomed insult to, and defiance of, the Judge when he rendered the decision that her marriage with Sharon was not a legal one. It will be remembered that she shouted in open court, "How much One sentiment should be the rule of did you get for that, Judge?" and action among all classes high and low, when the court ordered her arrest and removal, Judge Terry opposed the officers by the most violent means, for which he was sent to jail.
