Why Bill didn't Go.
There was to be a balloon ascension in a Connecticut town, says the New York Sun, and the professor had offered to let any one accompany him on his trip to the clouds who had the nerve to go. A young farmer, about twenty years old stepped forward as a candidate, but while the crowd was cheering him a voice called out: "Hey, Bill! I want to speak to you a minit."
It was his father, and leading him to the outskirts of the crowd he halted and asked: "Bill, d'ye know what you are doin'?"
"I'm a-goin' up in that balloon, dad."
"Expect to git down alive?"
"I den."
"Well, you never will!"
"Why?"
"When you left home this mornin' you had sixty cents in cash. I wanted ye to leave it home, but you wouldn't."
"I've got it yit, dad, a-lackin' three cents gone for peanuts."
"Yes, I pose so, and that professor knows it. That's why he's encouragin' you to go. When you git up thar' among the clouds he's goin' to rob ye."
"Shoo! dad! I'd have him took up when I got down."
"Not much, Bill. Arter he robs ye he'll throw ye overboard, and us who ar lookin' up will see ye come sailin' down like an old gander skimmin' over a hoss pond. Ye'll strike somewhar over in Sheppard's pastur lot, and ye'll go into the sile about eighteen feet afore ye bring up."
"Honest Injun, dad?"
"Bill, did I ever lie to ye? I may be able to fish up one o' yer shank bones to take home, and when I hand it to mother and tell her that's all that's left of William Ackfor Moses Schemerhon what's she goin' to say and how's she goin' to feel?"
"Shall I back water dad?"
"I would, Bill—I sartainly would. I know it would be sunthin' to brag of if yer got down alive, but yer never would."
"If I back water kin I spend them fifty-seven cents?"
"Wall, mostly, but not quite all. S'posen ye buy a cockernut and a cigar, and I'll kinder help eat and smoke as we jot along home, and save the rest for a rainy day. Times is going to be awful hard this fall, Bill."
"Yes, I guess. Wall, its a go, dad, and you kin go back and I'll kinder aige around to'rds a grocery. I've been tastin' cockernut fur the last five minits."

They Accuse Secretary Windom.
An unsavory public scandal is promised in connection with the affairs of the wrecked Bessemer Consolidated Iron Company, which created a sensation at the time of its collapse. The exposure now threatened by the defrauded stockholders is calculated to reflect very severely on the business method of the original bondholders who organized the syndicate, created a heavy bonded indebtedness, and after extracting a fortune out of their dupes, left them in the lurch, with the concern hopelessly insolvent. Theobald Otjen has now resigned the receivership in disgust and Alfred A. Krause has been appointed in his stead.
The stockholders intend to proceed both civilly and criminally against Secretary of the Treasury Windom, ex-Senator Stephen W. Dorsey, E. W. Ogle, of Cleveland, Robert G. Ingersoll, Jesse R. Grant and others who have associated in the cloudy transaction. The developments will, it is said, place Secretary Windom in a very bad light, and make public for the first time the inner workings of the deal which the cabinet officer is alleged to have engineered for the benefit himself and his friends. The charges to be brought against this coterie of public men will be conspiracy to wreck the company, issuing fraudulent bonds, selling ore and pocketing the proceeds, misappropriation of the funds and stealing the books of the company.
The Modern Idea.
Mrs. Youghusband—Oh, Charlie, the cook got angry this morning and left, bag and baggage. What are we going to do?
Mr. Youghusband—Why, my love, I thought you attended cooking school for seven months?
Mrs. Youghusband—So I did, dear, but that was merely to learn cooking as an accomplishment.—Burlington Free Press.
Advices from different parts of Mexico say that very heavy storms have been sweeping over that country since August 14th, visiting the different states and at different times. Reports from Mazatin and Manzanillo are that the steamers Porfiro Diaz and Alta have been wrecked.
"This literary business," said Jinglecash to his son, is a very nice thing, and I am willing to encourage you all I can to help you in that direction. As for myself, I never wrote anything worth reading." "Pardon me father, if I disagree with you," said the son, "but I have known you to write some very clever things." "Where?"
"In your check book."—Washington Capital.
Wife—"John, don't you want some of these plums for lunch? They're some I put up." Husband—"No; I don't like plums with the pits in." Wife—"But, John, these plums have no pits." "Husband—"Oh, that's so; they haven't. I knew there was something about them I didn't like."—Judge.
Visitor (at insane asylum)—"Who is that fine-looking man making stars, crosses and things out of letters?" Attendant—"Oh, he was the editor of a children's column in some paper. One week he lost the answers to the puzzles and tried to solve them himself."—Munsey's Weekly.
Border—"What is the reason I don't have a napkin any more?" Hostess (severely)—"Because before you eat you always take it to wipe your plate, cup, saucer, knife, fork and spoon, and that makes the napkin so dirty that I have to give you a fresh one each time."—Wasp.
Young swell—"See here! This watch won't run. What do you suppose is the matter with it?" Jeweller—"Well, I should say the fault is in that vest you have on. That pattern is loud enough to stop a clock."—Boston Herald.
Lone Train Robber—"Hold up your hands!" Passenger, feebly, "Don't shoot, mister. Can't you see that every man in the car has fainted dead away?"—Life.
