Owners of Ruins Anxious to Replace Them With Fine Buildings.

The Work of the Relief Committee and the Arrival of Supplies.

The indications yesterday pointed more strongly than ever to the fact that the city would be rebuilt immediately. Everybody was busy. Never in the history of the city did Riverside avenue and other streets, present the metropolitan appearance that they did yesterday. On either side of the street temporary quarters were being put up that business might be resumed. Nearly every one that was formerly in business within the that was formerly in business within the burned district have reopened and are doing business. Our business men have received the greatest encouragement from the wholesale houses they formerly bought goods from. No sooner had the news of the disaster been flashed over the wire, than telegrams came pouring in to the retailers to order all the goods they needed. This fact alone shows that Spokane Falls is recarded as a city of vast. is regarded as a city of vast and is recognized by the wholesalers and jobbers from New York to San Francisco as such. Although some of the merchants lost all they had, in the fire, their plucky and energetic spirit and excellent business qualities have placed them in a position where they can command goods to re-establish their business, and no time has been lost to take advantage of the situation. While there has been considerable activity in real estate feircles, there has been but little property sold within the burnt district simply because that property is not for sale. Real estate offices have been beseiged by parties niquiring about inside property. The impression COMMERCIAL IMPORTANCE porty is not for sale. Some lots on Front street between Howard and Stevens, were sold yesterday, however.

A great mady offers have been made for property, which the owners have refused, notwithstauding the price offered was in excess of what they asked for their property previous to the fire. General A. The activity in making preparations to rebuild yesterday was most encouraging, and, notwithstanding the heavy losses that have been sustained, there is little mourning. little mourning.

MORE NEW BUILDINGS.

Louis Zeigler commenced excavating pesterday for a new building on his corner opposite the site of the First National bank. Mr. Zeigler said there was little use standing around and mourning. He will start at once on a five-story structure, and will push the work as fast as material can be procured.
