Yakima Lawyer Wins American Bar Essay Contest

The American Bar Association recently announced the award of its annual $2,000 essay contest prize to Elwood Hutcheson of the Yakima Bar.

This annual contest is open to all members of the American Bar Association and the subject is chosen each year by a committee in charge. The prize was established by the late Judge Erskine M. Ross of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. By his will, Judge Ross established a $100,000 fund for the purpose of financing the annual award.

The subject for last year concerned the appointment or election of judges, and in his essay of approximately ten thousand words, Hutcheson favored the appointment of judges, with certain modifications.

Hutcheson is a graduate of the University of Washington. He formerly practiced in Seattle, but has for some years past been a member of the firm of LaBerge, Cheney & Hutcheson, of Yakima.

His essay will be read at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association in Kansas City, Mo., in September. This is the fourth year in which the award has been made, and the value of the prize was increased from $1,000 to $2,000 this year.

The winning of this prize by a member of the Washington Bar is a distinct honor and credit to the standards of the profession and legal education in the state.
