EDWARD NUSSBAUM, JR.

Lieutenant Edward Nussbaum, a former student at the University of Washington Law School, was killed in action in North Africa while saving his battalion from an enemy trap.

Lieutenant Nussbaum was born in Seattle, Washington, on March 15, 1918. In 1935 he graduated from Broadway High School, Seattle, and thereafter entered the University of Washington where he took his pre-law work. He was enrolled in the Law School for the academic year 1938-39 but interrupted his law course in 1939 to accept a commission in the 15th Infantry of the United States Army.

His former professors and classmates remember him as a young man of excellent character and exceptional ability. His heroic death justifies the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew and worked with him.

EUGENE C. LUCCOCK

The University of Washington School of Law has suffered a great loss in the sudden death of Professor Eugene C. Luccock on January 17, 1943.

Professor Luccock was born in Elizabeth, Pennsylvania, on March 18, 1891. He received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Washington and Jefferson College in 1912, and the degree of Bachelor of Laws from the University of Pittsburgh in 1915. In 1936, he was awarded a Master of Laws degree by Stanford University.

In 1915, he came to Seattle and was engaged in the practice of law until 1935, at which time he retired from active practice. At the time of his retirement, he was a member of the Seattle law firm of Todd, Holman and Sprague.

He joined the Law School faculty in 1937. He taught a number of subjects in the law school curriculum, but his chief interest seemed to lie in the field of Property, and he was teaching the Property courses at the time of his death. He was especially interested in Community Property problems and presented a scholarly paper on an important aspect of the Community Property law at the Legal Institute held at the University of Washington Law School in May, 1941. In addition to his teaching duties, he served as Editor-in-Chief of the Washington Law Review for two years, and was the author of several articles which have appeared in this publication.

He was a member of the Washington State Bar Association, the American Bar Association, the Seldon Society of London, the Order of the Coif, Phi Delta Theta, and Phi Delta Phi.

Professor Luccock was a sound lawyer and an exceptionally able law teacher, and was beloved by both his associates and his students. He will be greatly missed by his colleagues and students in the Law School.
