Editor's Notes

Hugh McGough

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.law.uw.edu/wlr

Recommended Citation
Hugh McGough, Editors Notes, Editor's Notes, 28 Wash. L. Rev. & St. B.J. viii (1953).
Available at: https://digitalcommons.law.uw.edu/wlr/vol28/iss3/2

This Editors Notes is brought to you for free and open access by the Law Reviews and Journals at UW Law Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Washington Law Review by an authorized editor of UW Law Digital Commons. For more information, please contact cnyberg@uw.edu.
Contents

Washington Legislation—1953

Civil Rights ................................................................. John B. Sholley 167
Racial Discrimination .................................................. 167

Corporations ................................................................. J. Gordon Gose 167
Corporate Charitable Contributions ............................... 167

Creditors' Rights ......................................................... Warren L. Shattuck 172
Labor Liens—Restaurant, Hotel, Tavern, Etc. Employees 172

Criminal Law ............................................................... John B. Sholley 175
Subversion ........................................................................ 175

Domestic Relations ....................................................... John W. Richards 176
Family Desertion—Non-Support ..................................... 176

Evidence ........................................................................ John W. Richards 176
Copies of Business and Public Records as Evidence ...... 176

Property ......................................................................... Harry M. Cross 178
Alien Land Law ............................................................. 178
Survivorship in Joint Tenancies ...................................... 180

Sales ............................................................................ Robert M. Taylor 181
Bulk Sales Law ............................................................ 181
Motor Vehicles ............................................................. 181

Social Legislation ......................................................... John B. Sholley 182
Unemployment Compensation ....................................... 182
Workmen's Compensation ............................................ 184
Compensation for Civil Defense Workers ..................... 186
Public Assistance .......................................................... 188

State Government ....................................................... Ivan C. Rutledge 193
Legislative Procedure .................................................. 193
Administrative Procedure ............................................. 194

Taxation ....................................................................... Alfred Harsh 197

Torts ............................................................................ John W. Richards 201
Survival of Actions—Death of Tort-Feasor ...................... 201

Deportation as a Denial of Substantive Due Process ....... Stimson Bullitt 205

Workmen's Compensation—Employees in Dual Activity Gordon F. Crandall 223

Recent Cases .................................................................. 236

Book Reviews .................................................................. 244
EDITORIAL BOARD OF THE LAW SCHOOL

Hugh McGough, Editor

Robert S. Mucklestone, Associate Editor  Myron J. Carlson, Contributions Editor
Dale Riveland, Revision Editor  Michael Mines, Business Manager

Alan F. Austin  Eugene A. Greenway  James F. McAteer
Joannne Bailey  Gordon Jaynes  Thomas E. Smail, Jr.
Robert F. Brachtenbach  Roger I. Lewis  William S. Stinnette
Newman L. Dotson  Ivor Lusty  Philip A. Trautman
George K. Faler

William E. Love, Faculty Adviser
John W. Richards, Faculty Business Manager

EDITOR'S NOTES

Professor Milton D. Green, faculty adviser of the Law Review for the past six years, has left Condon Hall to become Dean of Washington University Law School in St. Louis. When Professor Green was appointed to the Review in 1948, his position was “Editor-in-Chief.” He immediately renounced the title, became “Faculty Adviser,” and for the first time put editorial policy in the hands of the students. Since that time, the editorial board has consisted of a practically autonomous group of students. Unquestionably, the value of the Review as an educational tool has been multiplied by the reform. The increased student interest has added to the quality of their articles. Professor Green instituted a change for which we and the future members of the board owe him thanks.

The comment on employees in dual activity is one of a contemplated series of articles on various phases of the Workmen’s Compensation Act. It is hoped that they will be of some aid to the proposed committee which is to redraft the Act. The maze of inconsistency and confusion resulting from much legislative patchwork and no comprehensive revision, anything but alleviated by the reshuffling of the RCW compilers, is illustrated by the recent cases of Latimer v. Western Machinery Exchange, 40 Wn. 2d 155 (1952), reversed on rehearing, 142 Wash. Dec. 693 (1953) and Pink v. Rayonier, 40 Wn. 2d 188 (1952), reversed on rehearing, 142 Wash. Dec. 705 (1953). The earlier cases were unanimous departmental opinions. The same judges wrote the en banc decisions, also unanimous, which reversed the earlier decisions. The court was dealing with an anomaly, employers with no employees. At present, such self-employers are eligible for benefits under the act, contrary to the prior interpretation by the Department of Labor and Industries. Such eligibility, however, does not of itself preclude an action in tort against a third person employer covered by the Act, contrary to the assumption of appellant, respondent and the court in the departmental hearing of the above cases.

Hugh McGough