Our Success ...

- The most cited law journal focusing on the Pacific Rim & East Asia
The Washington International Law Journal is the most cited English-language journal in the world to focus on Pacific Rim and East Asian legal issues.
- Subscriptions from libraries and firms around the world
Over 175 law libraries and universities around the world subscribe to The Washington International Law Journal. All nine Supreme Court Justices have a subscription, as do some of the world's largest law firms. The journal is shipped to twelve different countries.
- International recognition as a premiere resource on Asian legal scholarship
Asian legal scholars view the Washington International Law Journal as among the most respected authorities on Asian law.

... Comes from You

- Improve the UW School of Law's rank/prestige
The US News & World Report bases its ranking system partially on the percentage of alumni that give back to the University and partially on law school resources. Your contributions to the journal through the University of Washington School of Law have a direct impact on the school's national reputation.
- Cycle of giving, standard of excellence
For two decades, the journal has been supported in part by gifts, allowing student members to improve writing and editing skills, enhance their level of experience, and explore scholarship in different parts of the world. The journal's reputation follows all of its alumni. Help us continue our tradition of excellence.
- Lasting impact on the Journal
Gifts to The Washington International Law Journal go a long way. Computers and applications will be used years to come. By reducing our production costs we can also afford to solicit more subscriptions and expand our influence in the scholarship community.
- Tax deductible
The University of Washington School of Law is a 501(c)(3) non-profit institution. 100% of your gift is tax deductible. When around 11% of funding comes from the state, your help is essential to our success.
